

Old Trading Posts of the Four Corners

After traveling extensively throughout the Four Corners region of Colorado, Utah, Arizona, and New Mexico, Richard Berkholtz has produced a comprehensive study of early-day trading posts. located on or near the Navajo, Hopi, and Ute Mountain Ute Reservations. The posts covered in his new book Old Trading Posts of the Four Corners were opened for business in the late 1800s and early 1900s up to 1950. While some are gone without a trace, Berkholtz provides a descriptive of each that includes directions to the site, a brief history, status, condition, owners, and occasional anecdotes of interest. Filled with past and present-day photographs of the posts, maps, and historical sidebars of the tribes and settlers these posts served, Old Trading Posts gives the reader a glimpse into the lives of the people who were and, in many ways, still are a part of the Old West.
